

Potassium hydroxide reacts with carbon dioxide to form potassium carbonate and water. Potassium hydroxide is used to remove carbon dioxide from the inside of the space station. One astronaut breathes out 2.7×10^{21} molecules of carbon dioxide. The space station contains 5 astronauts How many grams of potassium hydroxide does the space station contain. Your answer should include a balanced chemical equation.